Gertrude Berg, Who Acted The Complete Jewish Mother, Was Adored By Millions For Her Warm Heart, Common Sense, And Good Humor

Gertrude Berg, known to millions of Americans as the original Jewish mother of radio, television, stage, and screen, died in New York of heart failure at Doctors Hospital after a brief illness. She was sixty-six years old. Mrs. Berg had entered the hospital four days earlier for what was called a checkup before going on vacation.

More than twenty-five years ago, as radio's Molly Goldberg, she warbled across the Bronx courtyard, "Yoo hoo, Mrs. Bloom," and made the greeting into a national cliché. Ever since, in all her many roles, says the New York Times, Mrs. Berg was adored by a public that found her common-sense solutions to life's problems, delivered in rising inflections, heartwarming and good-humored.

Mrs. Berg spawned ideas without end, although they were mostly variations on the theme of the Jewish matriarch whose gentle domination calmed strife, united enemies, and ran the family. She wrote as much as she acted. She was to have starred in "The Play Girls" on Broadway next January. It was written by Leonard Spigelgass and was based on one of her ideas.

Mrs. Berg spoke onstage in a soft Yiddish accent that was captivating even in an age where dialect acting has become a sensitive area. Her Yiddish accent was assumed — she was born in Manhattan — but it was all in the family.

"My sense of Jewishness comes not from my father and mother so much as from my grandparents," she explained. "We scarcely spoke Yiddish at home. You'll notice there's no dialect, just intonation and word order."

Whatever she did, she did with full heart, shrugs, flutters, malapropisms and a passion for milking drama out of the most ordinary event. Brooks Atkinson, the former drama critic of The New York Times, once described her characterization of Molly:

"In her code of values, Mrs. Berg is more nearly right than Noël Coward, who is a more expert playwright; and her family makes better company than the over-civilized family J. B. Priestley introduced to us in 'The Linden Tree.'"

It made no difference whether she played an older woman attending college, as she did in a TV series, or a plump Jewish widow involved with an elderly Japanese man, played by the late Sir Cedric Hardwicke, as, says the New York Times, as she did in "A Majority Of One" in the theater and in the movies. Mrs. Berg was the complete mother.

Her hallmarks were such lines as "Enter, whoever," and "If it's nobody, I'll call back."

If success is measured by statistics, Mrs. Berg measured up. When she brought "The Goldbergs" to TV in 1949, she drew 13-million viewers. In depression days, she earned $2,000 a week as an actress and as the author of radio's "Rise Of The Goldbergs." On Broadway, "A Majority Of One" ran for 557 performances starting in 1959.

Offstage, Mrs. Berg was a quiet, friendly, enthusiastic woman who, without any self-consciousness, referred to her son-in-law as "My son, the doctor."

"I'm miserable when I'm not working," she once said, while describing her long workday. And she was a canny if goodhearted performer. There are no records of show business arguments of the sort that besprinkle the careers of so many stars.

Mrs. Berg liked to recall her early days in radio.

"I'd write a script and then sometimes we'd all get together and rewrite it in the studio just before going on the air," she said. "If we needed street noises, I'd have them put a microphone on the window sill and it would pick up the sounds on the ears below on Madison Avenue. It was fun because we did it ourselves. Now all the fun has gone out of it. It's a business."

Mrs. Berg was born on October 3, 1899, in what was then a Jewish section of Harlem. She was the only child of Diana and Jacob Edelstein. After attending public school and Wadleigh High School, she took extension courses in playwriting at Columbia University. While at college, she met and married Lewis Berg, an engineering student.

When the couple settled in New York, Mrs. Berg tried her hand at radio writing. Her first effort, "Effie And Laura," designed as a series, was canceled after the first show. Two years later, says the New York Times, she submitted another script to the National Broadcasting Company and read it to the broadcasters herself. They took the script and Mrs. Berg and "The Rise Of The Goldbergs" became radio history.

From her first show on November 20, 1929, the adventures of Mrs. Goldberg, her husband, Jake; Uncle David, and the Goldberg teenage children, Rosalie and Sammy, on Tremont Avenue, became a radio staple. Mrs. Berg received $75 a week, out of which she had to pay the cast. She wrote her scripts in longhand, hardly ever rewriting, and took from one hour to two and a half days for each.

When she missed a show because of a sore throat four weeks after the radio premiere and a substitute played Molly, the radio station received 11,000 protesting letters. The series, eventually a 15-minute, five-times-a-week occasion, was second only to "Amos 'n Andy" in popularity and longevity.

A letter from the Mother Superior of Notre Dame Convent, in Libertytown, Maryland, summed up the program's appeal: "One of the pleasures that the sisters have given up for Lent is listening to 'The Goldbergs.' We would all be deeply grateful, however, if you could send us scripts of the 'Goldberg' serials we missed after Lent is over."

Mrs. Berg drew her characters from life, and often the actors as well. Elevator operators, grocery clerks, and delivery boys often played their real-life roles on the show. Among the professional alumni of "The Goldbergs" were such performers as the late John Garfield, Allan Jones, Joseph Cotten, Ann Bancroft, Van Heflin, and Jan Peerce.

In 1934, the radio family left the air to go on tour. A year later, Mrs. Berg wrote and produced a program, "The House Of Glass," a radio series about summer life in the Catskills that didn't catch on. The Goldberg clan returned to radio for six months in 1936, says the New York Times, went off and then, on N.B.C. and the Columbia 1938 until 1946.

During a hiatus from 1945 until 1949, the year the program made its last appearance on radio, Mrs. Berg wrote her first Broadway play, "Me And Molly," which had 156 performances in 1948.

In 1949, "The Goldbergs" came to TV, where it lasted several years, including installments about vacations at Pincus Pines, the family's Catskill summer resort. In 1951, Mrs. Berg appeared in a movie, version of "The Goldbergs," called "Molly," which she wrote with N. Richard Nash.

Mrs. Berg insisted that she had started out as a writer, but she scored her greatest successes as an actress. She played summer stock, movies, and, most memorably, on Broadway as the widowed Mrs. Jacoby, who lost a son in World War II, in "A Majority Of One" opposite Sir Cedric, a wealthy Japanese widower whose daughter died at Hiroshima.

This was followed with another Broadway success, "Dear Me, The Sky Is Falling," in 1963.

Mrs. Berg won an Antionette Perry (Tony) Award in 1959 for her performance in "A Majority Of One," and a National Academy of Television Arts and Science (Emmy) Award in 1950 for her TV portrayal of Molly.

She wrote "The Molly Goldberg Cookbook" and, with her son, Cherney, "Molly And Me," her autobiography, says the New York Times. Besides her husband and her son, Mrs. Berg is survived by a daughter, Mrs. A. David Schwartz; and six grandchildren.

Musical Landscape Of Israel Changes In Twenty Years

The Kol Israel (Voice of Israel) Symphony Orchestra opened its fall season with a reminder of how the musical landscape has changed in nearly two decades of Israel statehood. The soloist was David Bar-Illan, an Israeli-born pianist who made his concert debut, says the New York Times, twenty years ago with the same musical organization, then the orchestra of the Palestine Broadcasting Service.

"There were only thirty-five members then, most of whom were foreign-born and educated. Today the orchestra numbers seventy members and most of them are Sabras (Israeli-born), the thirty-six-year-old Mr. Bar-Illan said.

The performance was held before a large and attentive audience in the 3,000-seat Binyanei ha'Ooma (Hall of the Nation). Mr. Bar-Illan, and possibly some of the seven orchestra members who played in the concert twenty years ago, recalled the earlier circumstances.

"It was in the concert hall of the Young Men's Christian Association," Mr. Bar-Illan said. "The building was surrounded with barbed wire. It was a security zone, right across the street from the King David Hotel, which was British headquarters." The King David Hotel was later partly destroyed by Jewish terrorists.

"An explosion went off outside right in the middle of the concert — you can hear it on the recording — but since no plaster fell in the hall we carried on," Mr. Bar-Illan said. "People were used to those things.

With the end of the British mandate and the 1948 Arab-Israeli war, the Palestine Broadcasting Service became Kol Israel, and the orchestra acquired the new name.

The Kol Israel orchestra has continued to perform weekly and in the ornate hall of the Y.M.C.A., although this year six concerts will be performed in the spacious Binyanei ha'Ooma, says the New York Times. Under the leadership of the Rumanian-born conductor, Mendi Rodan, the orchestra's concerts are broadcast over the state radio to listeners in Israel and abroad.

The Kol Israel Orchestra is only one of three major symphony and

Eban, At U.N., Urges Thant To Take Peace Role; Debate Be Curtailed

Abba Eban, Israel's Foreign Minister, proposed that Secretary General Thant help to bring the United States and North Vietnam together to discuss existing and future peace proposals in detail. The North Vietnamese Government would earn international respect, the Foreign Minister said, according to the New York Times, if it submitted the United States peace proposals to "the challenge of negotiation" without necessarily accepting them.

The importance and consequence of the proposals, he emphasized, can be tested only if they are "probed, explored, and clarified in the most careful and detailed manner."

The time has come, Mr. Eban told the General Assembly, to curtail debate and seek concrete solutions in private talks. He said Mr. Thant, by virtue of his office and the confidence he "universally inspires," was the man to bring the combatants together.

The Israeli minister's proposal was welcomed by many delegates. They thought his positive approach had rescued the discussion of Vietnam from the torpor that had prevailed since the Soviet Foreign Minister, Andrei A. Gromyko, rejected on September 23 the peace proposals made the previous day by Arthur J. Goldberg, the United States representative.

The United States failed to welcome Mr. Eban's suggestion of further peacemaking activities for Mr. Thant.

Ambassador Goldberg, a spokesman said, welcomes the many expressions by "a considerable number" of foreign ministers in support of the American proposals for peace made during the continuing general debate.

The omission of any reference to a role for Mr. Thant in response to a direct question might have two origins, diplomatic sources said.

One is the United States' belief that the Secretary General's three steps to peace are one-sided in that they ask the United States to take the first unilateral step: cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam.

American diplomats have also said that Mr. Thant's comments on the war invariably appear to place the greater blame on the Administration and its policies.

Mr. Eban, it was understood, consulted leaders of the New York Jewish community concerning his remarks on a solution to the Vietnam war. Last month Mr. Goldberg agreed to meet with some members of the Jewish community in an attempt to establish harmony in the wake of Washington reports that Mr. Johnson had singled out Jewish opposition to the war in Vietnam and linked it to American aid to Israel.

Diplomats expect that the United States peace proposals will be prominent in the discussions. The United States proposed these measures:

A halt in the bombing of North Vietnam accompanied by an assurance, private or public, of Hanoi's willingness to reduce its military operations.

The withdrawal of all American, allied and North Vietnamese forces under the supervision of the United Nations or another agency.

Negotiations, at which the Vietcong could be represented.

Mr. Eban lumped those terms with the stipulation that there should be no return of foreign troops and with the fulfillment, under international guarantees, of the Geneva agreements of 1954, which ended the French war in Indochina.

Such ideas, Mr. Eban said, emerge from the Secretary General's annual report and are present or implicit in Ambassador Goldberg's proposals. He noted that the General Assembly is not called upon to endorse any specific suggestions.

He said member states were required by the Charter to be "peace-loving and willing to carry out the obligations of the charter," but he endorsed a two-China approach to the problem of Chinese representation.

The Israeli Foreign Minister, in what was throught by some diplomats to be a reproof to the United States, said he found it surprising, that the United Nations had not been given the opportunity to consider a formula that would acknowledge both "the reality on the mainland and the reality of Taiwan," the most attention in a wide-ranging speech, a plea by Mr. Eban for Jews in the Soviet Union excited much comment.

Men of good will and progressive outlook across the world recognize the Soviet Union's "historic role" in defeating the Nazis, Mr. Eban said. But they have also expressed "a natural desire to see

MARRIAGES

STEINBERG-SENICA

The marriage of Miss Adele Senica, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Senica, 5833 Coolbrook Avenue, to Hyman Leonard Steinberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Steinberg, 4832 Mackenzie Street, was solemnized at Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue, on Sunday, June 26, at half-past six o'clock, by Rabbi Lester Rosner, assisted by Cantor M. Kaufler. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a fitted, sleeveless, gown of white peau de soie, made with an A-line skirt, and a lace coat, with three-quarter-length sleeves, which had a long train. Her tulle illusion veil was combined with a matching crown; and she carried a bouquet of white orchids. Mrs. Steven Steinman was her sister's matron of honour. She wore a coral-coloured, chiffon gown; with a crown of that colour; and carried white, and coral-coloured roses. Miss Sharon Steinberg, sister of the groom; and Mrs. Donald Steinberg, sister-in-law of the groom; were bridesmaids, each wearing a yellow, peau de soie gown; with a yellow crown; and carrying a bouquet of white, and yellow roses and carnations. Donald Steinberg was his brother's best man. The ushers were: Steven Steinman, Michael Steinman, Isaac Aptowitzer, Moe Lashinsky; cousins of the groom; Steven Byer, Jerry Pell, Nathan Kravitz, and Gabor Kertesz. Mitchell David Steinman, nephew of the bride, aged four and one half years, was ring-bearer. Yellow, white and coral-coloured roses, and carnations, were the wedding flowers. An orchestra played. Two hundred and twenty-five guests were received. Mrs. Senica, mother of the bride, wore a coral-coloured, sleeveless, lace gown, appliqued with beads, and a matching cape; and had a coral-coloured crown. MUSICAL LANDSCAPE OF ISRAEL two chamber orchestras, and there are many first rate kibbutzim orchestras. The Israel Philharmonic, which is one of the world's finest, has been in Australia now, and will visit the Soviet Union in November. The National Youth Orchestra, Gadna, of Tel Aviv, won the fifth world music concourse in Kerkrade, the Netherlands, last month, for the third year in a row.

This proliferation of musical talent affects soloists like Mr. Bar-Illan, who lives in New York and pursues his career from there.

"Even the largest audience per capita in the world cannot support all the performing artists that this country of 2,500,000 produces," the pianist said. A soloist at the age of six, Mr. Bar-Illan had an auspicious start. His first concert was at a ship launching.

"It was a passenger ship called the Tel Aviv," he said. "I remember it was eventually sold to the Japanese and sunk by the Americans."

Mr. Bar-Illan studied at the Juilliard School of Music in New York, returned to Israel to fight in the 1948 war, and then went back to the United States. He made his Carnegie Hall debut in 1954. He will perform at fifty concerts in the United States between October and May, says the New York Times, appearing next spring with the New York Philharmonic.

WE'VE GOT AN ELECTION COMING UP ON OCTOBER 23!

We did a good job together...
Let's stick together to do even more!

Our city has made tremendous strides in the past six years. Working as a team, Jean Drapeau and the Civic Party of Montréal have converted our metropolis into a city of which we can justly be proud. Much remains to be done and that same team is eager to get back to work on such major projects as —

- an urban redevelopment policy
- an air and water purification program
- expansion of the public transit system
- improvement of traffic conditions through increased development of the roads system
- a permanent beautification program
- additional recreational facilities

"We believe you are proud to be a Montrealer.

We ask you to tell us with your vote.

We believe you are satisfied with our accomplishments.

We ask you to let us know on —
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 23!"

MARRIAGES

SKOLNICK-VOSKO

The marriage of Miss Elinor Vosko, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving Vosko, 5000 Circle Road, to Saul David Skolnick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Skolnick, 6877 Chamranald Avenue, was solemnized at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, on Sunday, June 6, at six o'clock, by Dr. Chaim N. Denburg, Rabbi, assisted by Cantor Arieh L. Subar. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a white, sleeveless, lace gown; designed with a scoop neckline; and A-line skirt; and a long cape train edged with lace. Her short veil of tulle illusion was caught to a silk rose; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids, and stephanotis. Miss Rhona Vosko was maid of honour for her sister. She wore a mint-green, silk worsted gown; made with an A-line skirt; with a matching head-band; and carried green-tinted, and white, carnations and stephanotis. Mrs. Earle Jonas, sister of the bride, was matron of honour in an emerald-green, silk gown; with a green head-band; and carried a cascade bouquet of green-tinted, and white carnations and baby's breath. Leonard Skolnick was his brother's best man. The ushers were: Earle Jonas, brother-in-law of the bride; Allan Vosko, brother of the bride; Harvey Skolnick, brother of the groom; Barry Smordin, Paul Skolnick; cousins of the groom; Jerry Luterman, Samuel Silverton, Morty Baron, Hyman Rosa, and Gaby Kertesz. Mitchell Jonas, aged four years, nephew of the bride, was ring-bearer. Mrs. M. N. Fineberg played the wedding processional music. An arrangement of white, and green-tinted carnations, white snapdragons, and greenery decorated the Hall. An orchestra played. Three hundred guests were received in the Oval Room. Mrs. Vosko, mother of the bride, wore a green, silk, sleeveless gown; made with a slim skirt; with a green hat. Mrs. Skolnick, mother of the groom, wore a gold-coloured peau de soie gown; appliqued with green beading at the bodice, which had a panel back lined with green silk; and her hat matched it. Each had a corsage of white orchids. Mr. and Mrs. Saul David Skolnick spent their wedding trip at the Carillon Hotel, in Miami Beach, Florida, the bride going away in a three-piece, yellow, silk suit; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 3450 Linton Avenue. Mrs. Skolnick, a Registered Nurse, is a graduate of the Jewish General Hospital School of Nursing. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. H. THE CORNER

By Roberta Ann Saunders, in the Jewish Frontier. Miss Saunders, now a resident of the United States, was born in Prague, Czechoslovakia; emigrated to England in 1939, was on the staff of the Czechoslovak Government-in-Exile there; after the Second World War, back in Prague, was one of the personal secretaries of Jan Masaryk, the Czechoslovak Minister of Foreign Affairs; in 1947, was transferred to the Czechoslovak Embassy in London and resigned in 1948.

As the days wore on, I began to think more and more of my home, our beautiful city, the trips we used to take in the summer, swimming and hiking and, above all, our favorite pastime — picking mushrooms in the dense forests. We used to place bets on who would bring home the largest, juiciest, and firmest.

In the winter, the smell of Christmas affected us all, Jews as well as Christians. I had come from an "assimilated" Jewish family; not very religious, we were willing to assume the customs of our surroundings. My parents felt that our non-Jewish servants should have their Christmas, and why should we, the children, not share in the pleasure of a lavishly decorated tree? So my childhood memories were of gorgeous trees and lots of gifts.

Christmas also meant the big tree in one of our main squares, which was for all the poor children, and people would come and place gifts under it, which were then distributed to orphanages and other charitable institutions. A strong smell of incense came from the many open-market stands, and mingled with the delicious aroma of chestnuts roasting in outdoor ovens.

The market displayed Christmas decorations, religious symbols, toys, gingerbread cottages and hearts, cotton candy and other deliencies. The air was usually crisp and cold, and fresh snow made a soft cushion under our feet.

Mother must have had the rigorous Czech winter in mind when she admonished me frequently: "Be sure and wear your woollen panties. You know you are inclined to forget, and then you catch cold."

"Yes, Mother darling," I replied. "I'll be all right, I promise."

But I was not all right. I was lonely and isolated. I decided to move to London, where my uncle and many of my former friends were living. My life became carefree and gay. My friends and I did little work and had very little money. We became experts at eating as cheaply as possible. Sixpence (about seven cents) per meal was our budget and we used great ingenuity in finding new ways to undercut it.

"You know what I discovered?" said my friend Marian one day. "At Lyon's Corner House (the Schrafft's of London) they sell risotto for eleven pence. The waiter brings a huge dish full of the stuff, and starts unloading it on your plate. When he has given you what he thinks is a proper portion, he takes the dish away. But if we ask him to leave it, and to bring two plates, we can both have a substantial meal for fivepence ha'penny each."

That evening all started out according to plan. We asked the waiter to bring a dish of risotto, and two plates. He did, and gave me a plateful first. As he was dishing out Marian's portion, she looked too unconcerned for my liking, so I said to her in Czech: "Now, quickly, stop him before he takes the dish away!"

"Don't worry, lady," replied the waiter in Czech, "I'll leave it right here, where you can see it."

From then on, our evening risotto was assured, and with it our economic stability and vitamin intake.

My main reason for not taking a full-time job was that I wanted to devote my time to getting my brother Paul out of Czechoslovakia. I had found out that he could enter some English business as a trainee, provided the businessman who employed him would assume full sponsorship, and guarantee his upkeep.

I placed an advertisement in the London Times, asking for a sponsor for a refugee from Nazi oppression. One of the first replies I got read as follows: "It is people like you and your goddam brother who have got the world and England in the state it is today. I hope no one lifts a finger to help you. Your brother can stay where he is, and to you I say: go back where you came from, and don't bother us . . ."

Other replies were less discouraging, but no real help resulted. I decided to try something else. Whitechapel Road on the East Side of London is the main street of the Jewish quarter; I walked its entire length, went into shop after shop and asked whether anyone

Eastern Airlines takes off from Toronto.

On October 30, the quiet, powerful Whisperjets of Eastern Airlines start serving Toronto International Airport.

Today, Toronto is Eastern's newest city in Canada. Joining Montreal and Ottawa which we've been serving for quite a few years!

And now Torontonians can enjoy service Eastern style.

The kind of service Montrealers have been used to for a while. Service that starts with a dedicated Eastern ground hostess caring for you before you take off. And ends with another courteous Eastern ground hostess waiting to care for you as soon as you land.

Up in the air, Eastern is a special kind of service, too. A new atmosphere of warmth and friendliness, comfort and quality. A new adventure in dining whether you're enjoying a gourmet meal on First Class or a delicious hot meal on Coach.

Starting October 30, Eastern will be flying quietly from Toronto to exciting vacation centres like Tampa and Miami, and important U.S. business locations like Philadelphia and Washington via Buffalo.

More new destinations will be added in the near future.

would sponsor Paul. Finally, the owner of a radio shop signed the necessary affidavits. I was the happiest girl on earth at that moment and rushed off a letter to Paul.

"I am very grateful for what you are trying to do," he replied. "But, as you know, I am engaged to Svetla, and although her father will not let us marry because she is not Jewish and he does not want her to get involved. I cannot leave her. Her father is a sick man. He may not live very long. Her mother favors our marriage, and subsequent emigration. So we are just going to wait . . ."

The summer of 1939 drew to its close; Hitler's insatiable power-drive again shifted into high gear. I had just taken a new job as governess to two small boys, and we were sitting in the kitchen of their home when Chamberlain announced in sepulchral tones: " . . . and so, this country is at war with Germany." Immediately after his speech, the air-raid sirens sounded, and I dove under the kitchen table with the two children.

It was only the sirens being tested, though. The real test did not come until 1940. Marian and I were out of work, and we did not like the Blitz. There seemed to be nothing to keep us in London. We moved to a small country town on the border between England and Wales.

The British Government had relaxed its restrictions, and I was permitted to take a job as an office girl, most of the time fetching everybody's lunches, coffee and newspapers, but doing some typing and bookkeeping on the side. Within three weeks, my boss raised my salary by fifty per cent. I was now in a position to lead a poor but contented country-town life.

World Social Work Conference In Israel To Have Shazar As Honorary Head

Zalman Shazar, President of Israel, will serve as honorary president of the International Conference of Jewish Communal Service to be held in Jerusalem on August 19-23 of 1967, it was announced by William Avrunin, of Detroit, Michigan, and Dr. Giora Lotan, of Jerusalem, who were just named co-chairmen of the 1967 international meeting of Jewish social service workers, the first to be held in Israel.

Mr. Avrunin, who is president of the National Conference of Jewish Communal Service and executive director of the Jewish Welfare Federation of Detroit; and Dr. Lotan, who is director general of the National Insurance Institute of Israel, were chosen to direct the five-day Jerusalem conference by a Planning Committee of which Sanford Solender, of New York, executive vice-president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, is international chairman, and Bertram H. Gold, of Los Angeles, Cal., executive director of the Los Angeles Jewish Centers Association is American chairman.

Six vice-chairmen, five of whom were named in Washington, were also chosen for the Jerusalem conference: Saul Hayes, Q.C., of Montreal, executive vice-chairman of the Canadian Jewish Congress; Dr. Israel Katz, of Jerusalem, director of the Hebrew University School of Social Work; Walter Lippman, of Melbourne, Australia, president of the Australian Jewish Welfare Society; Julien Samuel, of Paris, director of Fonds National Juif Unifie of France; and Gustav Saron, of Johannesburg, South Africa, executive director of the South African Jewish Board of Deputies. A sixth vice-chairman from Latin America will be announced later.

Other officers elected were: Dr. Moshe A. Kurtz, of Jerusalem, director general of the Israel Ministry of Social Welfare, secretary; Philip Bernstein, of New York, executive director of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, assistant secretary; Y. M. Giladi, of Jerusalem, director general of the treasury of the Jewish Agency, treasurer; Henry L. Zucker, of Cleveland, executive vice-president of the Cleveland Jewish Welfare Federation, assistant treasurer; Sanford Solender, of New York, executive vice-president of the National Jewish Welfare Board, chairman of the conference planning committee; and Miss Miriam R. Ephraim, of New York, formerly national program director of the National Jewish Welfare Board, secretary general of the Conference.

Following a key note address by Gracnum Berger, Consultant on Centers and Camps of the New York Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, on "The Role of Jewish Communal Services In Strengthening Jewish Identification," four international commissions comprised of Jewish social workers from all over the world met to outline the program for the 1967 social work Conference.

"Declaring that the strengthening of Jewish identification is the raison d'être for Jewish communal services, Mr. Berger said that the continuity of Jewish life depends upon the success of Jewish welfare, educational, and religious organizations in educating all Jews to greater "Jewish knowledge, Jewish belonging, and Jewish behavior."

Presenting a "bleak" picture of the lack of strength in Jewish life throughout the world today, Mr. Berger said: "The problem of educating the Jewish layman Jewishly is the major problem confronting the Jewish community of the future, and, this, not so incidentally, is the first task of the professional working in the Jewish field".

"Somehow," he said, "we have failed to communicate diligently to our children the reasons why the Jewish people must continue. He added: "Jews are gradually becoming indistinguishable from our neighbors and we are losing the distinctive features which made us a light unto the nations". He warned: "In the years ahead, the pace of conformity will be so much stronger as to make the process of assimilation, not acculturation, even more pronounced than it is today".

Mr. Berger attacked a viewpoint long held by many Jewish social service practitioners: "The main reason for Jewish social welfare organizations is merely a rendering of service to those who come to our doors for assistance". He said that assimilation has been breeding upon such factors in Jewish community life as a declining birth rate, intermarriage, a breakdown of the traditional pattern of Jewish family life, and the disruption and dislocation of old Jewish neighborhoods.

He saw the growth of the Jewish day school movement as a promising hope but concluded that "the over-all picture for most Jews is bleak". Mr. Berger deplored the low estate in which Jewish education and Jewish communal service is held by much of the leadership of the American Jewish community who feel that this is not a respectable job for an intelligent, ambitious Jewish young person. He asked: "How many Jewish leaders in this room have given their children such encouragement?"

The planning committee decided that the 1967 Jerusalem conference will open on Saturday evening, August 19, with a keynote address on the subject: "State Of The Jewish World: Background For The Task Of Strengthening Jewish Identification". It will close with a plenary session on August 23. The three intervening days will be devoted to commission meetings in the morning and the workshops in the afternoon.

The four commissions will deal with "Strengthening Jewish Identity Through Transmitting Of The Jewish Heritage Of The Modern Jew," of which Dr. Julien Samuel, of Paris, France; and Sidney Z. Vincent, of Cleveland, Ohio, are chairman and vice-chairman; "Major Social Problems Of Jews The World Over" which will be headed by Louis D. Horwitz, of Jerusalem, Israel; and Irving Greenberg, of Newark, New Jersey; "Jewish Community Organization - Structure And Scope", of which Philip Bernstein, of New York; and Dr. Giora Lotan, of Jerusalem, will be chairman and vice-chairman; and the Commission on "Securing Qualified Professional Manpower Required By The Jewish Community" which will be headed by Dr. Israel Katz, of Jerusalem; and Miss Florence Hutner, of Toronto, Canada. There will be sixteen concurrent workshop programs which will be coordinated by Dr. Morton I. Teicher, Dean of the Wurzweiler School of Social Work of Yeshiva University, in New York.

The workshop themes will be: "Work With the Aging;" "Jewish Community Center Work;" "Jewish Education;" "Research Programs And Activities;" "Community Relations Service Concerned With Relationship With The Non-Jewish Community;" "Relationships Between Jewish Communal Services And General Community Services In Parallel Areas;" "Jewish Cultural Program"; "Relationships Between Jewish Institutions Of Higher Learning And Jewish Communal Service"; "Service To Immigrants;" "Vocational Services;" "Family Counseling And Child Care Services;" "Professional Education For Jewish Communal Service;" "Jewish Community Organization And Planning;" "Health Programs And Services;" "Jewish Youth Services;" and "Programs Of International Exchange Of Jewish Communal Workers".

10,000 Danced And Sang In Moscow Street On Jewish Festival

More than ten thousand of Moscow's Jews, mostly youngsters, danced and sang and skylarked on Arkhipov Street near the Central Synagogue on the Jewish festival of Simchat Torah, the Day of Rejoicing in the Law. The air was chilly but the mood was warm and vibrant as groups of young men and women forced openings in the crowd and danced, says the New York Times, holding arms and singing around other youngsters playing guitars.

The dancers were Jewish and the songs were Jewish, although some of the youngsters seemed to have trouble with Yiddish words.

"It couldn't have happened ten years ago," a middle-aged man in a tan raincoat said emotionally while shaking hands with friends who greeted him with "shalom." (Peace). Muscovites who were in the Central Synagogue last year for the festival said that this crowd was larger and even more carefree.

According to Jews in Moscow, the restraint on synagogue activities that existed when Nikita S. Khrushchev was Premier has been significantly moderated since he was deposed two years ago. But some of them still lower their voice when discussing the subject.

The police had put up signs to bar traffic on Arkhipov Street, a sloping lane near the Communist Party headquarters in downtown Moscow. But no uniformed policemen were visible in the vicinity during the celebration. Earlier in the day, a three-hour service was held in the crowded synagogue.

"It was marvelous," an old woman said as she watched youngsters dancing in the synagogue's courtyard. "The singing was better than in La Scala."

Many of the youngsters on Arkhipov Street readily conceded that they never attended the synagogue services. They were there, they said, because it was a Jewish holiday and they were Jews. A dozen boys were gathered around a transistor radio in a doorway, listening intently over the noise of nearby shouting and singing. "It's a program from Israel," someone explained.

Not far away, distinctly non-Jewish music was competing for attention. A young man had mounted a portable record player on the roof of an old Pobeda automobile and was playing Louis Armstrong jazz records. No one seemed to mind.

In the synagogue courtyard half a dozen teen-aged boys and girls were singing loudly and beginning to become a bit boisterous. "Quiet down a bit," a man cautioned them. "We don't want to create a disturbance." "Why not?" a dark-haired girl retorted quickly with a cheated smile. "Maybe tonight is the time."

The man turned and remarked to a bystander. "You see, we're all celebrating tonight, but with good sense." He pointed to his head, says the New York Times. "This is one night you won't find a bottle of vodka anywhere in the crowd. They know that any hooliganism would hurt us all."

Shanghai Jewish Community Sends New Year Greetings To The World Jewish Congress

Among the New Year greetings received by World Jewish Congress headquarters in New York is a message from the Council of the Jewish Community of Shanghai. The message, mailed September 5, bears the signature of the head of the community, H. Lewin, who extends to the World Jewish Congress "our most cordial wishes for a very happy New Year."

The Shanghai Jewish community numbers little more than twenty persons. The number was reduced in June by the death of P. I. Yudalevich who for many years had led Chinese Jewry as the chairman of the Shanghai Jewish Community Council. The community had numbered as many as 25,000 (twenty-five thousand) before the war.

The Shanghai Council maintains regular contact with the World Jewish Congress and with other major Jewish organizations in different parts of the world.

COPENHAGEN–MOSCOW

From Montreal starting November 1st Air Canada adds two fascinating destinations to its international system.

The inauguration of a new service of major importance marks a remarkable step in Air Canada's continuing growth.

Andersen's lovely maiden guards the entrance to Copenhagen harbor.

Fly Air Canada to Copenhagen, open door to all Scandinavia: a wondrous world of good taste, good food and good fun.

In Copenhagen old salts rub shoulders with silversmiths, cabinet-makers open their shops to visitors, some menus are four feet long, jolly matrons prepare scrumptious smorrebrods and Tivoli Gardens have a monopoly on laughter.
A skip and a jump: boats, trains and connecting airlines take you to the fjords of Norway, the avant-garde world of Sweden and the unheralded beauties of distant Finland.
The Scandinavians are crack designers. In their hands crystal, silver, teak or cloth turn into miracles of lissome simplicity.
Shoppers, beware! Unsuspected temptations are likely to turn your head dangerously. So, fetch your maps, ponder brochures, and prepare your Scandinavian foray!

The golden bulbs of St. Basil's on Moscow's Red Square.

Air Canada: first North American airline to fly to the U.S.S.R. —and without change of plane!

On Tuesday evening, November 1st, a DC-8 bearing the Maple Leaf emblem leaves for Moscow's Sheremetievo airport. This inaugurates, with Aeroflot (the national airline of the Soviet Union), the first and only same plane service between Canada and the U.S.S.R. From then on Air Canada's route system will stretch from the shores of the Pacific halfway around the world, to the heart of the Soviet Union.
Overnight the Canadian traveller will find himself by the Kremlin's ancient brick battlements, peering at the golden bulbs atop St. Basil's, shopping at the G.U.M. and sitting for a dazzling performance at the Bolshoi Ballet.
So, suddenly an old cliché comes to life: go to Moscow . . . "it's the trip of a lifetime".
